From the Principal

World Teachers' Day 2017

World Teachers' Day is an opportunity to acknowledge our teachers and say thanks for the significant contributions they make to our students and in our communities.

Celebrated in more than 100 countries, World Teachers' Day was established by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) in 1994 to recognise the role of teachers in society.

World Teachers' Day is held internationally on 5 October. As the day usually falls during school holidays, Queensland celebrates on the last Friday of October each year, today Friday 27 October.

On behalf of the WestMAC community, I commend the work of our teachers. One of the outstanding features of this community is the appreciation that our students and families express to me about the important work that our teachers do. So today, I offer our collective gratitude and thanks to all our teachers for their contribution to the development of our young learners.

Does practice make perfect?

In my address at last weekend's Music Awards Showcase, I highlighted both the importance and functional benefits of practice to developing the necessary skills, attitudes and performance standards. The underlying principle of practice is transferable to a range of other contexts - academic learning, dance and drama, sporting performance and more. Hence, I share an excerpt from my address here, and I hope that some of the points in this excerpt resonate and affirm the contributions made by many in the WestMAC community.

The concept of practice can sometimes raise tensions between parents and children. It can be frustrating to invest time and money into music lessons only to feel we are nagging our children to practice. Shouldn't they WANT to do it? And when they resist, or roll their eyes, are we 'pushing' them rather than letting them decide whether THEY want to engage with music or not? It's a conundrum because we know that to enjoy making music and to reap the many social, emotional, and academic benefits that flow from playing music, a level of competence is necessary. And no matter how much 'natural' talent a child might have, this competence will only come with practice.

It might help both parents and students to know that even great musicians have struggled with and found it challenging to be disciplined about practice. Amy Nathan is the author of Beating Those Practice Time Blues, and she describes how world-renowned violinist Joshua Bell had plenty of fights with his parents because he didn't want to practice. And believe it or not, Wynton Marsalis wanted to play basketball, not the trumpet.

Dr Phillip Rutherford is a composer, conductor and performer who teaches at Central Coast Conservatorium of Music Training and Education. He writes, "When children start learning a musical instrument, for most it is an activity and discipline unlike any other that they have tried. The results of learning a musical instrument are fantastic, although the work needed to achieve this is sometimes more than some children feel able to do. This is where the help of parents and the development of a regular practice routine can make the difference".

Helping children establish and stick to a routine, finding out what motivates our children, being constructively critical listeners, and helping them set goals are all ways we can help young musicians develop good habits. These are all great strategies. But there will be times when our parental role involves setting and enforcing expectations around practice. While some children seem to have a natural capacity to self-regulate, many others don't - or at least, not all the time. At these times, external regulation is needed. It's not always easy or enjoyable but over time, wise and well-judged moments of external regulation help children develop self-regulation or self-discipline. Being self-disciplined is critical for young people to experience success and fulfilment in all domains of life, both at school and beyond.

In a 2005 study, Angela Duckworth and Martin Seligman found that “highly self-disciplined adolescents outperformed their more impulsive peers on every academic-performance variable, including report-card grades, standardized achievement-test scores, admission to a competitive high school, and attendance”. They also found that, “self-discipline predicted academic performance more robustly than ... IQ” and that self-discipline “has a bigger effect on academic performance than ... intellectual talent”.

This research suggests that "... society's emphasis on instant gratification may mean that young students are unable to delay gratification long enough to achieve ... competence" (McClure, 1986, p. 20). To experience the joy and benefits of making music in the longer term, learners will sometimes need to sacrifice short-term pleasures, choosing to stick to a practice routine rather than watching television, for example. One of the many benefits of WestMAC's music program is that it supports the development of our students' self-discipline and self-regulation, which has positive knock-on effects academically, socially, and emotionally.

Respectful relationships

This term the theme running through RAVE lessons, Assemblies and Chapel services looks at how we can foster respectful relationships with one another. This means the way that we speak to one another, act towards one another and the way that we talk about others.

Respect is an important part of healthy relationships, and everyone has the right to be respected. When we feel respected we feel safe and confident that the other person cares for us and our feelings.

When we respect each other everyone feels:

- comfortable making their own choices and sharing their ideas
- like others care about our feelings
- safe
- accepted
- like they can say what they think or feel without being put down or hurt in anyway
- that saying 'No' is accepted for an answer, and
- that they can make mistakes and still be accepted and respected.

We have been talking about what this looks like in the playground and what it is like to have great mates. These are the friends who let everyone have a go at choosing the game to play, include others, say sorry when things go wrong, help you out when you get hurt. Everyone likes to play with great mates because everyone feels safe and can have fun.

Sometimes we come across mean mates in the playground. These are children who tease, use put downs, blame others when things go wrong, boss you around and they might even hurt you. Students have been reminded that if someone is being a mean mate it is important for them to let the other person know that what they are doing or saying is not okay. Students can:

- remember to use the High Five
- find another game to play with other friends
- get some help from an adult.

If students come across a situation where the College's expectations are not being met, they are encouraged to respond in a way that helps to make our community a safe place and supports the College values including:

- stand by the person being bullied
- ask them to join your game
- tell the person who is being a mean mate to stop
- get help from an adult.

Junior School Reception

Parents are reminded that the opening hours for Junior School reception are 8am to 4pm. Parents phoning to notify the College of a student's absence are should telephone 3813 4549 and leave a brief message.

TAS Sport 2018

Information regarding Pre-season for Trimester 1 has been sent to families and students. Please be aware that we are trying a different format of training sessions. All sports will have a set pre-season and in-season. The amount of training has not increased, except for extra sessions for Girls Touch Football and Boys Rugby Union. Our new format will maintain the current (approximately) 20 training sessions per season; eight sessions for pre-season (approximately one a week), a 2 hour Saturday training clinic and 10 sessions (approximately one a week) within the TAS season.

These changes have been put in place to manage student physical workload, prepare for the upcoming sport season and hit the ground running from the first match, and to allow the major three carnivals of Swimming, Cross Country and Athletics more opportunity to have student involvement at training. Any Strength and Conditioning training completed in the strength training centre in a student's own time and not part of an official TAS training session, is completely voluntary and for their own physical and athletic development.

What an amazing fortnight we are having in the Creative Arts. Our musicians have been competing in the Silkstone Vocal Eisteddfod and Prestige Music Fest, with more to come, and performing at the annual Music Awards Showcase. Meanwhile, our dancers are in the final stages of preparation for the annual Dance Concert at the Ipswich Civic Centre. As ever, our young performers are covering themselves with glory every time they step on stage.

Prestige Music Fest

Symphonic Band performed at Prestige last Thursday evening in the A Grade Concert Band section and achieved a Gold Award for their outstanding performances of the musically and technically challenging With Every Sunrise and Gael Force. On Friday evening, Performance Band competed at Prestige in the Middle School Concert Band section and brought home a Platinum Award, the highest possible, for their masterful performances of Where the Sun Breaks Through the Mist, The Legend of the Mountains and The Legend of Tizona. The adjudicator also made special presentations to two Performance Band players; Carl Flottmann and Tinashe Mapfumo, for their brilliant individual performances and musical leadership. Well done to our musicians for a fantastic achievement. We wish Big Band well as they head to Prestige tonight.

Silkstone Vocal Eisteddfod

Our Years 5 to 6 choir, Bella Voce, competed at the Silkstone Vocal Eisteddfod in the Junior Choir and Junior Sacred Choir sections, securing Gold Awards in both. Well done to Bella, accompanist Mr Bruce Ramm and Mrs Michelle French on a stellar achievement.

Music Awards Showcase

On Sunday afternoon, an enthusiastic Lostron Centre audience were treated to a program of wonderful performances by all College music ensembles at the annual Music Awards Showcase. With many of the groups fresh from their recent competition successes, the quality of the performances was first class. There was also the opportunity to recognise the achievements of students in our individual tuition studio program and the contributions of our ensemble conductors, visiting tutors and student leaders. WestMAC Friends of the Arts supported our performers and raised $753 with the raffle to further support Creative Arts programs at the College.

Dance Concert

This Saturday our dancers will grace the stage of the Ipswich Civic Centre for what promises to be a thrilling end-of-year concert. With a string of outstanding successes at regional eisteddfods and competitions behind them, WestMAC Dancers are primed for a brilliant finish to the year. Musicians from the College Big Band will also be there to entertain the crowds in the foyer prior to the evening performance. All the best to Miss Erin Judd and her team for what will undoubtedly be a great night in the theatre.

Our musicians and dancers will then be preparing for performances at the three sub-school Presentation Nights in November, bringing to a close an incredibly vibrant and artistically rewarding year for all.

Equestrian

Our national representative riders will be recognised for their achievements this year at the annual Sport Presentation Night next Friday 3 November. Planning is already underway for what is shaping up as an equally successful 2018 Equestrian season.
