Principal

Amy Morin is a psychotherapist at Northeastern University, Boston. In her book, 13 Things Mentally Strong Parents Don't Do (2013), Morin aims to support parents to raise strong, confident children who will mature into capable adults by alerting us to some parenting practices we should try to avoid:

1. Condoning a victim mentality: Rejection, failure and unfairness are part of life. Don't feed self-pity, but teach children that no matter how difficult or unjust the situation is, they can always take positive action.
2. Parenting out of guilt: Giving in to guilt teaches children that we can't cope with it. Children (and adults!) need to be able to say no when appropriate so they can make wise decisions ("If you loved me, you'd do this"; "If you were my friend, you'd let me copy your homework") and take care of themselves.
3. Making children the centre of the universe: If our lives revolve around our children's, they grow up thinking it's normal. Self-absorbed, entitled adults make poor partners, employees and members of the community.
4. Allowing fear to dictate choices: We all want to protect our children, but if we don't let them take age-appropriate and responsible risks, they learn that fear must always be avoided. Instead, teach them courage by helping them to face fear and step outside their comfort zones.
5. Giving children power over them: If children dictate what is for dinner or how leisure time is spent, they are being given more power than they are developmentally capable of handling. Treating children like equals robs them of mental strength. Instead, allow them age-appropriate choices that still maintain parental authority. We need to teach children to follow instructions, eat things they don't like, hear things they don't want to hear and do things they don't want to do.
6. Expecting perfection: High expectations are healthy, but expecting perfection is not. It's ok to fail and completely normal not to be the best at everything. Help children strive to become the best version of themselves, not the best at everything. This instils self-worth that is not dependent on how they measure up to others, real or imagined.
7. Allowing children to avoid responsibility: Sometimes it's easier to do things ourselves than to ensure children do their chores (e.g., unpacking a lunchbox, making a bed, putting their toys away). And sometimes we give into the temptation of letting our children be carefree. But doing age-appropriate tasks at home doesn't burden children; rather, it gives them the mental strength to be good citizens, partners and parents.
8. Shielding children from pain: Hurt feelings, sadness, and anxiety are part of life, and experiencing painful feelings gives us the chance to learn how to tolerate discomfort. Children need guidance and support to deal with pain so they can handle life's inevitable hardships.
9. Feeling responsible for children's emotions: When we pander to sadness and tantrums, we unwittingly take responsibility for regulating our children's emotions. However, children need to develop emotional competence; that is, learn to manage their own feelings. Proactively teaching children healthy ways to cope with emotions so they are not dependent on others to do it for them.
10. Preventing children from making mistakes: Natural consequences are some of life's greatest teachers! Let children mess up sometimes (e.g., forgetting their homework or PE gear) so they can learn from their mistakes and become stronger and wiser.
11. Confusing discipline with punishment: Punishment is about inflicting suffering; discipline is about teaching children to do better in future and make good choices. Imposed discipline leads to self-discipline, and consequences should help children develop the self-discipline to make better choices.

12. Taking shortcuts to avoid discomfort: Giving in to whining or a tantrum might make our lives easier in the short term, but it is not good for our children in the long term. We need to model delayed gratification and show children we can resist tempting shortcuts. This helps our children become strong enough to persevere when it's tempting to give up.
13. Losing sight of their values: The demands of day-to-day life sometimes cause us to lose sight of the big picture. We need to make the effort to ensure our priorities reflect the things we really value in life, like family time, intellectual and spiritual curiosity, and a desire to be the best version of ourselves.

Morin's advice reminds us that a confident, strong-minded child is not one who never experiences sadness, disappointment and hurt. Rather, instilling mental and psychological strength makes children resilient to and helps them cope with setbacks, anxiety and fear so they can reach their potential. Morin's advice is also salient for teachers and other care-givers.

Go the Blues

Congratulations is extended to Lawson House, who this week took out the trifecta. They were successful in winning the Intercourse Cross Country carnival, the Ball Games competition and the House Spirit cup.

Despite the soggy conditions the Cross Country Carnival was a successful event, with the students showing great house spirit. Well done to all those students who attended and participated on the day.

Service Learning

At WestMAC, we recognise the importance of Service Learning; serving others as part of the education of our young people. In fact, the Senior School Philosophical Statement makes explicit reference to the notion of fostering servant leadership in our students.

Some of the recognised benefits of service are:

- assists in building confidence, resilience and respect
- teaches compassion, empathy and tolerance
- can lead to increased academic outcomes due to the sense of connectedness with the community
- significant contributor to happiness.

Further, Anglican Dioceses throughout Australia believe Anglican schools should participate in God's call to serve the world.

Consequently, the students in Years 10 and 11 are required to complete a minimum of seven hours of service per semester. There is a document within the Student Portal that needs to be filled out once the students have completed their required hours, and submitted to their House Coordinator.

Importantly, any student in Year 11 who wishes to apply for a leadership position in 2019 must have completed both their Year 10 hours (14 in total), plus this semester's hours. If you have any queries or concerns with regards to the College expectations please make contact with your child's House Coordinator.

Middle School

As we reach the middle of term, you may be observing some changes in your child's overall behaviour and wellbeing. In casual terms we've reached the 'hump' of a long term that sees pressure from various contexts building for our students. I'm sure many of you may have seen signs of this at home, so please know that this is normal and you are not alone. Each of our students respond to these increasing demands in different ways. Some may be well prepared and focused, whereas others are feeling somewhat behind and needing to complete some much needed detailed revision. Regardless, it is important that at the end of term, students feel like they have made the most of their opportunities to excel and feel proud in their results, both in and out of the classroom.

It is important that students remain resilient and know that challenges lie ahead. It is my hope that in partnership we will continue to encourage and provide the opportunity for each student to be the best they can be. Many students may feel somewhat anxious but it is important that they engage in the learning opportunities provided to build a sense of accomplishment and success.

Finally, as we reach the end of February I need to ask how each student's New Year's Resolutions are going as statistics show that by the end of this month 80% will have given up. Midway through the term, it may be a worthwhile time to discuss how your daughter or son is managing their academic and co-curricular areas and offering them support in achieving their goals.

Lost Property

Here in the Middle School we have an eruption of hats on a weekly basis. It's important if a hat goes missing that they see Mrs Watt in RMiddle School reception. Please make sure that hats are clearly named for identification. If they aren't claimed after a week, they're put in the general lost property area. Thank you.

Cybersafety

This week at Assembly Mr Caldwell spoke to our Years 4 to 6 students around the topic of cybersafety. The key messages for students were as follows:

- WestMAC's position is that students in the Junior School should not have social media accounts. This is in line with the official age requirements for various social media platforms, most of which require users to be at least 13 years of age.
- We would prefer that students did not bring their smart phones or internet-enabled devices to school at all.
- In accordance with our Junior School policy, students who do have a phone at school (for use when travelling on the bus), must ensure that it is turned off and in their bag or given to their teacher during the school day.
- Keep online interactions positive – there are so many great things you can do on the internet, so don't spoil it!
- Be open and honest with parents about what they are doing online – parents are there to protect children, not to stop them from having fun.
- Students are encouraged to let a parent or a teacher know if they have experienced anything online that concerns them.
- Students are encouraged to think about their digital footprint – what is posted online is there forever and may have an impact on life in the future.

Given the importance of assisting our children to safely navigate the cyber-world, the Anglican Schools Commission has engaged Brett Lee from Internet Education and Safety Services (INESS) to develop a series of online course for parents. Brett has 22 years of experience as a police officer, including 16 years as a detective and five years as an undercover investigator in the online world.

I strongly encourage all families to take this opportunity and to engage with these user-friendly and practical resources that will equip you with information and skills to assist your children to safely navigate the online world.

Chaplaincy

By the time you read this, there will only be 3 weeks until 'World's Greatest Shave.'

This is The Leukaemia Foundations' 20th Anniversary of running this incredible fundraiser for those living with, or supporting those with blood cancers. I really want us, as a College, to be at the forefront of that fundraising. Some of us will shave our heads, some of us will colour or cut our hair. You may, or may not choose to be part of that but you can all choose to sponsor the team. Our team is called WestMAC and we're hoping, with your support, to raise a huge amount of money. We also have a signed Reds Jersey to raffle. Wouldn't you love to have a chance to have that amongst your memorabilia, all for the price of a few $5 raffle tickets?

I can't stress enough how important I feel it is to have our students become responsible global citizens, who see themselves as part of the solution, and actively and compassionately work towards making a difference while they're at school and after they graduate. For some, this desire to make the world a better place for everyone may spring from their faith and the values engendered by those beliefs. For others, it may just be from a strong sense of social justice and the belief that each human life is of worth.

Obviously, for many people of faith, those ideals are also integral to their belief in God. In a way the why isn't as important as the how. How do I make a difference? How do I live out my life so that I'm valuing all people as worthy of love, compassion and justice? How can I actively seek to channel those beliefs outward? I'm sure you'd like me to tell you how. Or perhaps you'd find it extremely annoying if I tried to, but the fact is, it's something we have to work out for ourselves.

The way in which I practice those values, (call them Christian values if you like, although they're certainly not exclusive to Christianity) will be something only you can decide, but I do think that each of us needs to give this matter some serious thought and then, undertake some sort of action too.

If you're looking for a short-term, one-off, easy to act on method, please feel free to sponsor a member of the WestMAC WGS team and/or buy some rugby jersey raffle tickets.

Blessings
Julie

2018 Lions Youth of the Year Quest Congratulations

Year 12 students Danielle Scalia and Catriona Clarkson represented the College at the Rosewood Lions Youth of the Year Quest public speaking on Wednesday 21 February. The students had already been interviewed by the judging panel on their leadership, community involvement and citizenship.

Catriona Clarkson and Danielle Scalia competed at Rosewood Lions Youth of the Year

Catriona spoke passionately about women's access to education to Pakistan, and Danielle opened the audience's eyes to the plight of children working in sweatshops.

Danielle was named the Overall Winner of the night. She will now represent Rosewood Lions and the College at the District Round on Boonah on 10 March. We wish her all the best for this competition.

Chinese New Year

On Thursday 15 February staff and international students gathered for lunch in the College to celebrate the beginning of the Chinese Year of the Dog. The Lunar New Year commenced on Friday 16 February. In Confucian societies this is a time for families to gather and spend time together and is equivalent to the Western Christmas celebrations. Millions of people in China travel great distances to be with their families for New Year celebrations.

Traditional lion dancing occurs during Chinese New Year and much noise is made with drums and clashing cymbals to frighten away the evil spirits for the year.

Apex Debating

Eight teams of excited and slightly nervous students competed in the first round of Apex Debating on Monday evening. Teams were generally well prepared and presented their speeches confidently. I would like to thank our wonderful coaching team for the assistance they have given the students. Six of the eight teams won their debates on the night, with the other results being very close.

Students now have a better idea of how much effort it takes to prepare and rehearse a debate, and the importance of teamwork. Hopefully this will make their preparation for the next debate less stressful.

The next debate is on Monday 12 March. Teams will need to check with their coaches for the draw and competition times.

Rostrum Voice of Youth

Parent Webinar 13

It's time we talked AGAIN: Pornography, young people and sexuality today

Our presenter Maree Crabbe explains.....

Over the past decade or so, pornography has become mainstream. For young people growing up in this era of ever-new and accessible technology it is almost impossible to avoid exposure to pornography. Consumption, particularly for young men, has become normalised.

But porn is no longer the centrefold it used to be. Porn's move from a brown paper bag onto smart phones and personal laptop computers has been accompanied by a shift towards more aggressive content.

While many young people express some awareness that porn is fantasy, they also commonly convey the ways their sexual understandings and experiences are being influenced by what they, or their partners or peers observe in porn. Porn's influence has serious implications for young people's capacity to develop a sexuality that is respectful, safe, freely consenting and mutually pleasurable.

Pornography has become a parenting issue we can't afford to ignore.

This session will explore:

- What do parents need to understand about porn and its influence on young people's sexual understandings and expectations
- How can parents support their children's healthy social and sexual development in an age of pornography?
